

PrimeLife Privacy Dashboard

This is a Firefox extension designed to help you track what kinds of information websites collect when you visit them, and a means to set per site preferences, e.g. to disable 3rd party cookies that can be used to track you across the Web, to block 3rd party content or even to disable scripting. The Dashboard collects information and logs it to a local database on your computer. You can view details for the current web page, and set preferences for that website. You can also switch to the data track and run a variety of queries, e.g. to see what external third parties are used by a given site.

The Dashboard makes it easy to view which sites you have given permission to access your geographic location without asking you again. You can easily revoke these permissions. A further feature is the means to see a map of where the browser thinks you are, based upon which WiFi access points your computer currently sees. You can also view the site's P3P policy if available.

For more information visit: <http://www.primelife.eu/results/opensource>