Data formats

- We want something like “ITS for JSON”
- Probably want something like “XLIFF {translation helping magic} for JSON, HTML”
- Need to find motivators
- Need to consider how to deal with inline markup of text in JSON (and other formats) in a practical way that people will use it.
- Consider using ITS>RDF mapping

IDNs and IRIs: some examples

- `chaals@яндекс.рф` becomes `chaals@xn--d1acrjx3f.xn--p1ai`
- Or:

IDNs and IRIs

- Need to scope the problem:
 - What is a domain name?
 - In-country vs. international use
 - Is it just the domain name?
- Companies won't fix things until they see a problem that is worse than the cost of working around it
- Recommended that people actually use things to break systems
- Need enough systems to all work together

IDNs and IRIs

- Language accessibility will be a big issue for many
- Challenges related to input in heterogeneous environments
- There are technology infrastructure issues and UI requirements/comforts needed
- Need to get all the players in the room to discuss
- Risk: Industry needs to address this before legislation happens and “splits” the Web (legislation can drive adoption or break things)

MLW Workshop: What Works Well?

- Open/accessible/broad nature
 - Cross-disciplinary and high-level: builds connections
 - Focus on things that work (rather than abstract/academic points)
- No obstacles to attendance (fees)
- Format with shorter, focused presentations
- Creates serendipitous connections with concrete outcomes

MLW Workshop: What Else Could We Do?

- Better promotion and integration of online tools (IRC, chat?)
 - Include a demo at the start and actively utilize
 - Maybe an etherpad for collaborative document
- Pecha-kucha
 - In combination with posters
 - Perhaps for similar topics
- More story-telling/background at the start
- Question management and provide ways for clarification during talks
- More women presenters and geopolitical diversity

MLW Workshop: How Do We Continue?

- Issue: Will have 2015 workshop, but then no funds
- Outsourcing work in running workshop while maintaining continuity through program committee and program “geniuses” (e.g., Felix)
- Registration fees not an option, but consider micro-sponsorships
- Target 150–200 registrations
- Need more ideas from you (send ideas to ishida@w3.org)
